FRIEND ON AMERICAN MUSICIANS

John C. Freund, the editor of Musical America, who will make an address at Augustana college Tuesday evening, May 23, has recently prosecuted his vigorous campaign for the recognition of the American musician in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he spoke before a large audience of representative musical persons; in St. Paul, where the famous Schubert club presented him in a lecture that was heard by a brilliant audience; in Wisconsin, Minneapolis, Superior, Wis., Duluth, Itasca, where he spoke before a large audience of Cornell students, and in the leading cities of Texas.

The fact that Mr. Freund has done this work without accepting fees, and has even paid his own traveling expenses, has aroused considerable interest in musical circles, where propaganda of that description is virtually unknown.

Mr. Freund is nearly seventy years of age, but he retains the full vigor of young manhood, and he always manages to hold the close attention of his audiences by the forcefulness of his delivery and the conviction and authority with which he speaks. One of the features of the address which is especially appreciated by musical persons, is its interesting anecdotal side. Having been connected with the musical profession as a journalist for nearly fifty years, he has a large fund of reminiscences culled from his experiences with such celebrities as Mme. Patti, Jean de Reszke, Erika Gerster and others. By this means the address takes on a flavor which appeals directly, not only to the trained musician, but to all who have merely a general interest in music. In other words, it is not a technical address adapted particularly for persons of specialized education in music.

HONOR FOR MOTHERS IN CITY CHURCHES

Mother's day was fittingly observed yesterday with beautiful services in most of the city churches. White carnations were worn in memory of mothers who have gone before and red carnations to honor those who are living. At the First Methodist church a very impressive service was held when more than fifty men whose mothers have passed in death, each bearing a white carnation, walked in procession and placed the flower in an old fashioned rocking chair near the church altar, the audience at the same time standing and singing a Mother's day song. Dr. O. T. Dwinell preached a sermon on "Honoring Motherhood" and Mrs. H. F. Hinkley and the choir sang special appropriate selections. At Broadway Presbyterian church Mrs. J. E. Clarkson read a selection especially suitable to Mother's day, the sermon by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Wilson, was in keeping with the occasion and the music was likewise appropriate. Other pastors of the city had prepared special sermons honoring motherhood and large congregations were present at all the services.

To Attend Doctor's Meeting. The Illinois State Medical society will hold its annual meeting at Champaign tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday. Dr. E. M. Sala will attend from Rock Island. Dr. Bruner of Port Byron is the county delegate.

STRETCHING CURTAINS

English housewives use this method for stretching curtains. It is much easier than using the stretchers and results are fully as satisfactory. Stretch a clean line as tight as possible and have the clothes props washed free of dirt. Fold the curtains while wet, lengthwise, with opposite scallops together, placing a clothes pin in each scallop (pair). Then insert a clean prop in each curtain. If this does give the desired weight something may be hung on each end of the prop. Let hang until thoroughly dry.

BEHIND THE STOVE

This is an easy and quick way to clean woodwork or tiles back of the stove: Put clean cloths in mop stick, have a pail of hot suds, put in one teaspoon ammonia, dip in mop, let drain a little, and wash up and down, and across, rinse with cold water. This saves stooping and work can be done in half the usual time. Behind the stove and bath tub can be reached easily.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl 19 years old and in love with a fellow three years my senior. Although he has declared his love for me several times I find it hard to believe he means it. I've never heard anything about him going with other girls, and as he works nights I hardly think he has a chance to. Do you think he really loves me as much as he says he does?

(2) This same fellow lives in another town and he only comes to see me every few weeks. He says he would like to come more often, but isn't able to. He objects to my keeping company with other fellows and when I do he becomes very angry. Should I give up all my gentlemen friends for him?

(3) Is it proper for four couples to go riding in a four-passenger car?

(4) If a fellow is jealous of a girl is it a sign that he loves her?

L. C. N.

(1) I think he loves you. But if the town in which he lives is near by and if he doesn't come to see you often than once in six weeks he can't love you very much.

(2) Do not give up your other boy friends until you are engaged.

(3) No. Eight people in a four-passenger car would make it too crowded.

(4) Jealousy is not a sign of love. I know a little girl 18 years old who thinks she loves a boy a few years older than herself. He pays no attention to her unless in some way she makes him jealous, and so when she is with other boys she goes places where she thinks he will see her. The result is that he telephones her and goes to see her. Then he loses interest until his jealousy has again been aroused.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 22 and have been going with a nice young man for two years. We became engaged a year ago. He doesn't live here, and he only comes to see me once a month. Since our engagement I have kept company with another fellow. He drinks, but he thinks a lot of me and wants to marry me. I refused to marry him, but I think more of him than I do the fellow I am engaged to. He is coming next Sunday and I told the fellow who lives in this town that he was coming. He told me that if I left him that Sunday for the other fellow he would quit me. I love him. What do you think I should do?

THANK YOU.

If you want to be perfectly miserable accept the man who drinks, but if you are looking for happiness give him up. A drinking man is entirely selfish and refuses to consider anyone but himself. The wife of a drinking man is never free from worry because she cannot trust her husband; in many cases she has children that are not normal; and in most cases the support of the family falls upon her shoulders. I should feel criminal if I married a drinking man, because of the wrong I would do my children in giving them unfortunate conditions. I think you better give up both men and wait until you love some one worth marrying.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man 24 years old and am in love with a girl of 20. Although I love her I have not decided to marry her. There is another boy about two years younger than I am who also loves her. I think she prefers me, but he has far more money than I have and is able to take her to more and better places than I can. What can I do to make her give up this young man? I do not want to become engaged to do so.

A. S. N.

You are a very selfish man to want the girl to give up a man who probably wants to marry her. You deserve to have her drop you. In the future consider her interests as well as your own and give up the idea of having her for your own until the fancy moves you to find another girl.
